

Anthony Duigan

Workshop for Africa - A Pan-African Programme for building Ethical Leadership and Good Governance in Africa.

Born in Pretoria, South Africa, Anthony Duigan studied philosophy, psychology & theology in Ireland and Rome before becoming a newspaper journalist for 13 years. He went into corporate communications, public relations strategy and speech-writing for executives for 15 years before co-founding the local branch of John Carlisle Partnerships, an international consultancy in project collaboration and effectiveness, in 1999.

Founding member of several local and national community-based conservation bodies.

Helped structure and run the Harambee Leadership Training Programme (under auspices of IofC) for young Africans - in South Africa, Ethiopia and Nigeria - over the past five years.

Currently coordinator of 'Workshop for Africa', a Pan-African programme for building ethical leadership and good governance in Africa.

Lives in Rhenosterspruit Nature Conservancy outside Pretoria.